Here's what your gift could buy ...

The March of Dimes is supposed to save lives, not take them. But under the pretext of researching birth defects, the March of Dimes has funded dozens of cruel, scientifically useless experiments on cats, rats, primates, rabbits, ferrets, and other animals.

When you contribute money to the March of Dimes, your donation may be used to hurt animals—not help babies.

Here's what your gift to the March of Dimes could buy:

a rat for cocaine experiments

$169

a brain-sectioning knife

$546

a restraint device for monkeys implanted with electrodes

$370

a kitten whose eyes are sewn shut

$600

a guillotine to slice off small animals' heads

Please don't contribute to cruelty. Many wonderful, compassionate charities, such as Easter Seals, Birth Defect Research for Children, the Child Health Foundation, and the Heimlich Foundation, put all their funds into programs that directly benefit babies and families and never waste a penny on cruel animal experiments.
